Department of Dermatology, Regional Hospital of Vicenza, and GISED Study Centre, Vicenza & Bergamo, Italy.

Prof. Naldi took a Degree in Industrial Design at the School of Engineering and Design of Milan, before moving to Medicine.

He graduated as a medical doctor at the University of Pavia in 1981 and then worked for three years in the Laboratory of Clinical Pharmacology of the Mario Negri Institute in Milan.

In 1988 he moved to the Department of Dermatology of the University of Milan, Bergamo General Hospital, and qualified as a full professor of Dermatology in Italy in 2012.

He is currently the head of the Department of Dermatology of the Regional Hospital in Vicenza and the honorary president of the Study Centre of the Italian Group for Epidemiologic Research in Dermatology (GISED) in Bergamo.

His research interests focus on classical and clinical epidemiology in Dermatology, on pragmatic clinical trials, on methods to assess the safety of medical interventions, and, more recently on telemedicine and big data analysis, with the final aim of improving patient care.
